

No proving ground can match the elements which make competition the final test of a Whippet's conformation. The rivalry of the dogs, the unexpected moments, the constant stress on the entire body, and the incentive to win are present only in racing.

Not all Whippets are raced but all Whippets should be raceworthy. Shoulders, temperament, front assemblies, rear-ends, musculature—the total dog—should be built to racing standards.

Can a Whippet be too well-built for other venues? Of course not.

But if you're serious about Whippets, you need to know what it takes to make them functional. Put your breeding program to the ultimate test. Take your Whippets racing.

Racing—the ultimate proof.

